Leveled Literacy Intervention. It is used as a small group pullout reading/writing program that is supposed to last around 18 weeks. The teachers delivering the program had great things to say about it. All (or most) of the elementary schools use this program. I think that some of our students would benefit, and this could be used as another tool to help our low readers.

Currently Winlaw has 22 students who are reading below grade level (we started the year at 29) We have made some significant improvements with a lot of our learners but we still have some who are struggling. The only problem is that this program is very pricey ~ $2,700.

Teachers and Jon wanting to bring literacy ahead for new. All teachers need to be on board. CBAL is limited with reading strategies, teachers would training. Support of literacy program – what would that look like?
